I will talk to the sun, I will chase my own rainbow
Let me take to the stars, and escape my own shadow

Every time I turn around things are all the same
Everybody's reaching out for someone to blame
The search is not over until I decide
It may take a while for me to lose my foolish pride

Maybe now I'll think about the things I choose to say
Maybe this is what they preach about and then take away
The war is not over until I resign
Then the things that I see won't control my mind

Where do we go from here and where do we belong
When will we ever learn that loving is not wrong
Why do we fear that things that we don't understand
We must begin the change the power's in our hands
